About This Book

ost students find the rules of English grammar to be confusing, if not outright overwhelming. Adding to the muddle are the many exceptions to the rules that are just plain maddening. But understanding grammar is essential for students to speak and write with competence and clarity.

Practice Makes Perfect: Mastering Grammar can be a valuable resource in learning grammar. It can be used by both students and teachers. Students (working alone or with their parents) can complete the worksheets, while teachers will find the materials of the book to be useful for classroom instruction. Tip sheets throughout the book highlight grammatical facts and rules, and self-correcting worksheets provide students with an interesting way to learn and practice grammar skills.

Learning grammar is challenging. It is my hope that this book will make the study of grammar an enjoyable and successful experience.

How to Use This Book

Practice Makes Perfect: Mastering Grammar is divided into nine parts. Each part concentrates on grammar skills and includes tip sheets and worksheets. An answer key for the worksheets is included at the end of the book.

Part 1 "Sentences" includes three tips sheets and seventeen worksheets that focus on sentence types, sentence structure, subjects, predicates, fragments, and run-on sentences. In addition, four review worksheets are included at the end of this section.

Part 2 "Nouns" includes four tip sheets and ten worksheets that focus on singular nouns, plural nouns, common nouns, proper nouns, irregular plural nouns, and possessive nouns. The section concludes with four review worksheets.

Part 3 "Verbs" contains six tip sheets and twenty-nine worksheets that cover action verbs, linking verbs, verb phrases, direct objects, indirect objects, predicate nominatives, predicate adjectives, contractions with verbs, tenses, irregular verbs, and subject-verb agreement. Three review worksheets conclude this section of the book.

Part 4 "Pronouns" contains five tip sheets and sixteen worksheets on personal pronouns, antecedents, subject pronouns, object pronouns, possessive pronouns, and indefinite pronouns. Three review worksheets are also included.

Part 5 "Adjectives" contains two tip sheets and seven worksheets on identifying adjectives and proper adjectives and the comparison of adjectives. Three review worksheets conclude this section.

Part 6 "Adverbs" includes three tip sheets and eight worksheets on identifying adverbs, the comparison of adverbs, and double negatives. The section also includes three review worksheets.

Part 7 "Prepositions, Conjunctions, and Interjections" contains four tip sheets and ten worksheets on prepositions, prepositional phrases, adjective phrases, adverb phrases, conjunctions, and interjections. The section ends with four review worksheets.

Part 8 "Punctuation and Capitalization" contains eight tip sheets and twenty-three worksheets on end punctuation, commas, colons, semicolons, apostrophes, quotation marks, italics, and capitalization. Eleven review worksheets are also included.

Part 9 "Usage and Proofreading" contains one tip sheet and six worksheets on words that cause confusion, and one tip sheet and eight worksheets on proofreading to find grammatical mistakes.

The tip sheets and worksheets throughout the book are designed to make learning grammar easier. Each tip sheet serves as a resource, providing facts and information about topics and skills in grammar. The worksheets have clear directions and require no additional materials. You may want to check the tip sheets if you need help in completing the worksheets. The worksheets are self-correcting. You are presented with a trivia question at the top of the worksheet, which you can answer by completing the worksheet correctly.

The skills covered in this book follow the typical language arts and grammar curriculum for grades 6 through 8. The skill or topic addressed in each worksheet is included with the number and title of the worksheet in the table of contents. The contents therefore serves as a skills list.

You will find that some skills and topics are addressed by two, three, or more worksheets. In such cases, the worksheets progress in difficulty from basic to more challenging, the first worksheet of the set being designated by 1, the second by 2, the third by 3, and so on.

The tip sheets and worksheets throughout this book offer 206 separate activities. They offer a variety of activities that will help you gain a greater understanding of grammar.

Sentences

A sentence, in its simplest form and structure, is an arrangement of words that expresses a complete thought. Sentences are the foundation of communication in English.

The tip sheets and worksheets contained in this section focus on sentences. The first tip sheet and Worksheets 1.1 through 1.3 focus on sentence types and structure. The second tip sheet and Worksheets 1.4 through 1.14 concentrate on subjects and predicates. The third tip sheet and Worksheets 1.15 through 1.17 concentrate on fragments and run-on sentences, and Worksheets 1.18 through 1.21 provide reviews of sentences.

TIP SHEET

Kinds and Structures of Sentences

Sentences may be one of four kinds:

- 1. A declarative sentence makes a statement. It ends with a period: The rain ruined the picnic.
- 2. An interrogative sentence asks a question. It ends with a question mark: Do you have homework tonight?
- 3. An imperative sentence gives a command or makes a request. It ends with a period:

Please open the window.

4. An exclamatory sentence expresses strong emotion. It ends with an exclamation point:

Look out for the car!

Sentences may also be classified according to structure:

- A simple sentence has one complete subject and one complete predicate:
 Tom went to band practice.
- A compound sentence contains two or more simple sentences that may be joined by a conjunction such as and, but, or, or nor. A comma usually comes before the conjunction. Sometimes a semicolon may join the simple sentences. The simple sentences that make up a compound sentence are called independent, or main, clauses:

Terri came home from school, and she started her homework.

• A complex sentence contains one independent clause and at least one dependent, or subordinate, clause. The independent clause can stand alone. The dependent clause cannot:

When the alarm went off, Danny automatically hit the snooze button.

Subjects and Predicates

Sentences are built around subjects and predicates. In the following examples the subjects and predicates are italicized.

• The complete subject of a sentence includes all the words that tell who or what the sentence is about:

James is an excellent baseball player.

The powerful storm swept up the coast.

The snow will fall throughout the night.

• The simple subject is the most important word or words in the complete subject. The simple subject is usually a noun or pronoun:

James is an excellent baseball player.

The powerful storm swept up the coast.

The snow will fall throughout the night.

 Subjects may be compound. A compound subject has two or more simple subjects:

Roberto and Anna are twins.

• The complete predicate of a sentence includes all the words that tell what the subject is or does:

James is an excellent baseball player.

The powerful storm swept up the coast.

The snow will fall throughout the night.

• The simple predicate is the most important word or words in the complete predicate. It is a verb or a verb phrase:

James is an excellent baseball player.

The powerful storm swept up the coast.

The snow will fall throughout the night.

• A predicate may be compound, which means it has two or more simple predicates:

Jason swims and jogs for exercise.

TIP SHEET

Fragments and Run-On Sentences

Sentence fragments and run-on sentences are incorrect sentences.

• A fragment is a group of words that make up only part of a sentence. A fragment does not express a complete thought. A fragment may be missing a subject, a predicate, or both:

A package to Louis.

Finished her homework.

The playful puppy.

• To correct a fragment, rewrite it so that it contains a subject and predicate:

I sent a package to Louis.

Kim finished her homework.

The playful puppy bounded after the squeaky toy.

• A run-on sentence occurs when two or more separate sentences are joined incorrectly:

The boys played video games they watched a movie.

The magician was excellent, the audience marveled at his tricks.

• To correct a run-on, combine the ideas, or write the sentence as a compound sentence with the correct punctuation. You may also separate the different ideas and write them as two sentences:

The boys played video games and watched a movie.

The boys played video games, and they watched a movie.

The boys played video games. They watched a movie.

The magician was excellent, and the audience marveled at his tricks.

The magician was excellent. The audience marveled at his tricks.

Nouns

ouns are words that name a person, place, thing, or idea. There are many different kinds of nouns you should know.

The tip sheets and worksheets that follow will help you in your study of nouns. The first tip sheet starts this section with a list and description of the eight parts of speech. The second tip sheet and Worksheets 2.1 through 2.5 focus on singular and plural nouns, and common and proper nouns. The third tip sheet and Worksheets 2.6 and 2.7 focus on irregular plural nouns. The final tip sheet and Worksheets 2.8 through 2.10 cover possessive nouns, and Worksheets 2.11 through 2.14 offer a review of nouns.

TIP SHEET

The Parts of Speech

Each word in English can be classified according to the way it is used in a sentence. Some words may be used only one way. Others may be used in more than one way. When we refer to the parts of speech, we are speaking of the different ways words are used in sentences. There are eight parts of speech.

- Noun: names a person, place, thing, or idea
 Examples: James, sister, sky, rabbit, freedom
- Verb: shows action or state of being Examples: walk, run, is, were
- Pronoun: takes the place of a noun
 Examples: I, you, he, she, it, they, them, anybody
- Adjective: describes a noun or pronoun
 Examples: little, happy, silly, big
- Adverb: describes a verb, adjective, or another adverb
 Examples: suddenly, now, quietly, quickly, very
- Conjunction: joins words or groups of words
 Examples: and, but, or, yet, as, although, when
- Preposition: relates a noun or pronoun to other words in a sentence
 Examples: from, in, on, to, below
- Interjection: shows strong feeling or emotion
 Examples: Oh no! Wow! Look out!

Nouns

A noun names a person, place, thing, or idea. There are many different kinds of nouns:

- Common nouns name any person, place, thing, or idea.
 - Examples: boy, girl, school, city, ocean, mountain, democracy
- Proper nouns name a particular person, place, thing, or idea.
 - Examples: John, Mary, the United States of America, North America, Mississippi River, Golden Gate Bridge, Mexico, Pacific Ocean
- Singular nouns name one person, place, thing, or idea.
 - Examples: student, day, night, kitten, town, church, valley, city, potato
- Plural nouns name more than one person, place, thing, or idea. Most plural nouns form their plural by adding -s or -es.
 - Examples: students, days, nights, kittens, towns, churches, valleys, cities, potatoes
- Possessive nouns show ownership by adding an apostrophe and -s or just an apostrophe. They can be singular or plural.
 - Examples: Charles's book, the cat's pillow, the girls' soccer team, the puppies' dish, the children's toys
- Count nouns name things that can be counted. These nouns have plural forms.
 - Examples: trees, rivers, students, towns, books
- Noncount nouns, also known as mass nouns, name things that are not usually counted. (Although noncount nouns have plural forms—for example, the sands of the world's deserts—these forms are seldom used.)
 - Examples: snow, anger, love, health, sand
- Collective nouns name a group of persons, places, or things.
 - Examples: crowd, herd, team, audience

Possessive Nouns

Possessive nouns show ownership. They indicate that a thing belongs to someone or something. Apostrophes are used to show the possessive case. Possessive nouns may be singular or plural.

• To write the possessive form of singular nouns, add an apostrophe and -s.

Examples: Sue's coat, Charles's book, the bird's cage, Oregon's forests

Exception: When a word of more than one syllable ends in an "s" sound, the singular possessive may be formed by adding only an apostrophe. This eliminates awkward pronunciations.

Examples: Moses' leadership, Ms. Rogers' office, the witness' account of the accident

• To write the possessive form of plural nouns that end in -s, add only an apostrophe.

Examples: the two sisters' bikes, the puppies' bed, the boys' locker room, the Johnsons' house

• To write the possessive form of plural nouns that do not end in -s, add an apostrophe and -s.

Examples: the men's ski team, the children's toys, the mice's nest

Verbs

Y erbs are words that express action or state of being. Along with a subject, every sentence must have a verb.

The following tip sheets and worksheets focus on verbs and verb usage. The first tip sheet and Worksheets 3.1 through 3.10 cover action verbs, linking verbs, and verb phrases. The second tip sheet and Worksheets 3.11 through 3.15 focus on direct and indirect objects. The third tip sheet and Worksheets 3.16 through 3.18 concentrate on predicate nominatives and predicate adjectives, while Worksheet 3.19 concentrates on verb contractions. The fourth tip sheet and Worksheets 3.20 and 3.21 cover verb tenses, the fifth tip sheet and Worksheets 3.22 through 3.25 address irregular verbs, and the sixth tip sheet and Worksheets 3.26 through 3.29 cover subject and verb agreement. Finally, Worksheets 3.30 through 3.32 provide reviews of verbs.

TIP SHEET

Two Kinds of Verbs

Verbs are words that express action or state of being.

Action verbs tell what the subject of a sentences does:

Tony writes a sports column for the school newspaper.

Susan read two novels last week.

The hawk flew over the field in search of prey.

State-of-being verbs, also known as linking verbs, show the condition or state of a person or thing. They link the subject with a word in the predicate. Forms of the verb be—am, is, are, was, were, being, and been—are linking verbs:

Tyrel was happy.

Juan is an excellent baseball player.

I am hungry.

• Other verbs such as appear, become, feel, grow, sound, seem, look, and taste can also serve as linking verbs. To serve as linking verbs, these verbs must be used in a sentence in which they can take the place of the verb be:

Larissa seemed surprised.

Larissa was surprised.

The puppies look sleepy.

The puppies are sleepy.

• A verb that contains more than one word is called a verb phrase. The last word in the phrase is the main verb. All other words in the phrase are helping verbs. There are several helping verbs: am, are, is, was, were, be, being, been, have, has, had, do, does, did, will, would, shall, should, can, could, may, might, and must.

Tom had made several careless mistakes on his test.

Maria may finish her report by Friday.

We will be going to the movies tonight.

Direct and Indirect Objects

In many sentences, words after the verb complete the action named by the verb. These words may be direct objects or indirect objects. Here are some facts about and examples of direct objects:

- A direct object usually is a noun or pronoun.
- A direct object follows an action verb and receives the action of the verb. Verbs that have direct objects are called transitive verbs. Verbs that do not have direct objects are called intransitive verbs.
- A direct object answers the question whom? or what?
- A sentence may have one, two, or more direct objects:
 Jessica called me from her cell phone. (Whom did Jessica call? Me.)
 Sue plays the guitar and piano. (What does Sue play? Guitar and piano.)

Some verbs also have an indirect object. Here are some facts about and examples of indirect objects:

- An indirect object usually is a noun or pronoun.
- An indirect object always comes before a direct object. Only verbs that have a direct object can have an indirect object (but a verb that has a direct object may not have an indirect object).
- An indirect object answers the questions to whom?, for whom?, to what?, or for what? after an action verb.
- A sentence may have one, two, or more indirect objects:
 Sara gave Josh the report. (Indirect object is Josh; direct object is report.)
 Mischa sent Jim and Hannah birthday cards. (Indirect objects are Jim and Hannah; direct object is cards.)

Be careful not to mistake adverbs or objects of prepositional phrases for direct or indirect objects.

TIP SHEET

Verb Tenses

The tense of a verb indicates time. Tense shows when something in a sentence happens, happened, or will happen. The most commonly used tenses of verbs follow.

- The present tense expresses current action or state of being.
 - They walk for exercise each day.
- The past tense expresses action or state of being that has happened.
 - They walked yesterday.
- The future tense expresses action or state of being that will happen in the future. It is formed by adding the helping verbs will or shall to the present tense form of the verb.
 - They will walk tonight.
- Present perfect tense expresses action or state of being that began in the past and that may still be going on. It is formed with the helping verb has or have and the past participle form of the verb.
 - They have walked this morning.
- Past perfect tense expresses a past action or state of being that happened before another past action or state of being. It is formed with the helping verb had and the past participle.
 - They had walked before going to work.
- Future perfect tense expresses an action or state of being that will have ended before a specific time or event in the future. It is formed with the helping verbs will have or shall have and the past participle.
 - They will have walked before dinner.

TIP SHEET

Regular and Irregular Verbs

The basic forms of a verb are called its principal parts. These parts are the present, past, the past participle, and the present participle.

Most verbs are known as regular verbs. They form their past and past participle forms by adding -d or -ed to the present form. The past participle requires the helping verbs have, has, or had. Regular verbs form their present participle by adding -ing. The present participle requires a form of the verb be as a helping verb.

Some regular verbs have minor spelling changes when adding -d, -ed, or -ing. A final -e may be dropped (for example, glide, glided, gliding). A consonant may be doubled (grip, gripped, gripping). A -y may be changed to -i (carry, carried, carrying). Here are some examples of the principal parts of regular verbs:

Present		Past Past Participle P	resent Participle
walk	walked	(have) walked	(are) walking
hike	hiked	(have) hiked	(are) hiking
sip	sipped	(have) sipped	(are) sipping
cry	cried	(have) cried	(are) crying

Not all verbs form their principal parts in these patterns. The past and past participle forms of irregular verbs do not end in -d or -ed. They may change their spelling, or they may not change at all. Here are some examples:

Present	Past	Past Participle	Present Participle
begin	began	(have) begun	(are) beginning come	came	(have) come	(are) coming give	gave	(have) given	(are) giving hit	hit	(have) hit	(are) hitting know	knew	(have) known	(are) knowing
teach	taught	(have) taught	(are) teaching

Learning the forms of irregular verbs will help you to use them correctly.

TIP SHEET

Agreement Between Subjects and Verbs

Subjects must agree with their verbs in number.

• A singular subject requires the singular form of a verb. A plural subject requires the plural form of a verb. Because the singular and plural forms of verbs in the past tense (except for the verb be) are the same, most confusion with agreement occurs with verbs in the present tense.

Nan plays basketball on the middle school team. (present)

The Williams twins play baseball on the middle school team. (present)

Nan played basketball on the middle school team. (past)

The Williams twins played baseball on the middle school team. (past)

• Compound subjects (whether singular or plural) that are joined by and require the plural form of the verb.

Beth and Maria ride the bus to school.

The Taylors and the Smiths live on the same street.

 When the parts of a compound subject are joined by or or nor, the verb agrees with the nearest subject.

Valerie or Billy is in change of the pep rally. (Billy agrees with is.)

His parents or Tom has the keys. (Tom agrees with has.)

Neither Larissa nor her parents have the directions. (Parents agree with have.)

 Prepositional phrases that come between subjects and verbs do not affect agreement.

The crickets in the field chirp all night. (The prepositional phrase is in the field.)

• The pronouns I and you require the plural forms of verbs in the present tense.

I play saxophone in the school band.

You play drums in the school band.

The brothers play drums in the school band.

Pronouns

Pronouns are words that replace nouns. There are many different kinds of pronouns.

The tip sheets and worksheets that follow address the different pronouns and their usage. The first tip sheet introduces pronouns, and Worksheets 4.1 through 4.4 concentrate on identifying pronouns and antecedents. The next two tip sheets and Worksheets 4.5 through 4.9 cover subject and object pronouns. The fourth tip sheet and Worksheet 4.10 concentrate on who and whom. The next tip sheet and Worksheets 4.11 through 4.13 focus on possessive pronouns, while Worksheet 4.14 addresses pronoun contractions. Worksheets 4.15 and 4.16 cover indefinite pronouns, and Worksheets 4.17 through 4.19 conclude the section with reviews.

TIP SHEET

Subject and Object Pronouns

Pronouns can be used in different ways in sentences. They are often used as subjects or objects.

• Subject pronouns (also known as pronouns in the nominative case) are used as subjects or predicate nominatives in sentences. The subject pronouns are I, you, he, she, it, we, they, who, and whoever.

I played video games last night. (subject)

They went to the movies. (subject)

Who went to the game? (subject)

This is he. (predicate nominative)

The students were Margo and she. (predicate nominative)

• Object pronouns (also known as pronouns in the objective case) are used as direct objects, indirect objects, and objects of prepositions. The object pronouns are me, you, him, her, it, us, them, whom, and whomever.

Tom called her yesterday. (direct object)

Whom did Jason contact? (direct object)

Mia sent them the package. (indirect object)

Do these keys belong to him? (object of the preposition to)

With its surface 1,349 feet below sea level, this is the lowest lake in the world. What is its name?

To answer the question, read the story below. Determine whether the underlined pronouns are subject pronouns. Starting with the first sentence, write the letters beneath the subject pronouns in order on the blanks at the bottom of the page. You will need to divide the letters into words.

Amy, Melissa, and William met in their school's library. They were working \overline{G} together on a science project. After the librarian gave $\frac{\text{them}}{R}$ some reference books, the students started searching for possible ideas.

"\underline{\text{We}} need a good topic," Amy said to \underline{\text{her}} friends.

E I

They began to brainstorm, but couldn't decide on a subject.

"Can you look in here?" said Melissa to William, handing him a book.

"How about the water cycle?" he said.

"That topic sounds good to \underline{me} ," said Amy.

Ν

"There should be enough information for \underline{us} ," said Melissa.

"Who wants to check for information on the Internet?" said Amy.

"I will," said Melissa, giving them a big smile.

Although this bird cannot fly, it can run up to forty miles per hour. What is the name of this fast-running bird?

To answer the question, read the story below. Determine whether the underlined pronouns are object pronouns. Starting with the first sentence, write the letters beneath the object pronouns in order on the blanks at the bottom of the page. You will need to reverse the letters.

Kerrie and $\underline{\text{her}}$ older sister Samantha went on a nature walk recently. $\underline{\frac{\text{They}}{\text{N}}}$ took lunch and plenty of equipment with them.

Н

"Do you think we will see any animals?" Kerrie asked as they stood in a small clearing.

"We might," said Samantha. "Please hand \underline{me} the binoculars."

Kerrie pulled the binoculars from $\underbrace{\frac{her}{M}}$ knapsack and handed $\underbrace{\frac{them}{I}}$ to her. $\underbrace{\frac{She}{A}}$ watched as Samantha scanned the surrounding area.

"There. Do \underline{you} see \underline{it} ?" Samantha said, pointing at a stand of trees. "A fawn.

And there's a bigger deer just behind him."

Т

"Yes," said Kerrie. "I see them. But they don't see us."

TIP SHEET

Avoiding Mistakes with Subject and Object Pronouns

To avoid making mistakes when using subject and object pronouns, remember these tips:

- Only the following pronouns can be used as subjects or predicate nominatives: I, you, he, she, it, we, they, who, and whoever.
- Only the following pronouns can be used as direct objects, indirect objects, or objects of prepositions: me, you, him, her, it, us, them, whom, and whomever.
- Mistakes often occur when pronouns are a part of compound subjects and objects.

Bryan and me played basketball yesterday. (incorrect; me can be used only as an object)

Bryan and I played basketball yesterday. (correct)

Lindsay and her went shopping. (incorrect; her is an object)

Lindsay and she went shopping. (correct)

Tyrique and them love playing video games. (incorrect; them can be used only as an object)

Tyrique and they love playing video games. (correct)

Between you and I, I think the soccer team faces a tough season. (incorrect; I can be used only as a subject pronoun and cannot be used as the object of the preposition between)

Between you and me, I think the soccer team faces a tough season. (correct)

• To make sure you are using pronouns in compound subjects correctly, read each pronoun separately with the verb. Mistakes will become obvious.

Bryan and me played basketball yesterday. (incorrect)

Bryan played basketball yesterday. (correct)

Me played basketball yesterday. (incorrect)

I played basketball yesterday. (correct)

Who and Whom

Use the following tips to help you avoid mistakes with who and whom.

• Who is a subject pronoun.

Who is going to the movies?

Who is in your group?

• Whom is an object pronoun.

To whom was the package addressed?

Whom did you ask?

• There is a simple way to make sure you are using these words correctly. Substitute he, she, or they for who. Substitute him, her, or them for whom. If who or whom is used as an interrogative pronoun and asks a question, turn the sentence into a statement. If the substituted pronouns make a correct sentence, you have used who or whom correctly.

Adjectives

A djectives are words that modify nouns or pronouns. Adjectives provide details and tell what kind, which one, how many, or how much.

The tip sheets and worksheets of this section address various topics and skills related to adjectives. The first tip sheet and Worksheets 5.1 through 5.3 concentrate on identifying adjectives, while Worksheet 5.4 focuses on proper adjectives. The next tip sheet and Worksheets 5.5 through 5.7 focus on the comparison of adjectives, and Worksheets 5.8 through 5.10 provide reviews.

TIP SHEET

Adjectives

Adjectives are words that describe or modify a noun or pronoun. There are different kinds of adjectives.

Most adjectives tell what kind, which one, how many, or how much.

The icy wind made me shiver. (what kind)

The office is on the third floor. (which one)

The storm dropped a few inches of snow. (how much)

• The words a, an, and the are special adjectives. They are called articles. The is a definite article. It refers to a specific person, place, thing, or idea. A and an are indefinite articles. They refer to general persons, places, things, or ideas. Use a before words beginning with a consonant. Use an before words beginning with a vowel sound.

Have the steamy soup for lunch. (specific; the steamy soup)

Have a sandwich for lunch. (nonspecific; any kind of sandwich)

• When used before nouns, the words this, that, these, and those are demonstrative adjectives. They point out specific nouns or pronouns. This and these point out nouns or pronouns that are nearby. That and those point out nouns or pronouns that are farther away. This and that come before singular nouns or pronouns. These and those come before plural nouns or pronouns.

This pen is out of ink.

These pencils should be used for the test.

That star is bright.

Those stars are faint.

Note that when this, that, these, and those are used alone, they are called demonstrative pronouns.

Proper adjectives are adjectives formed from proper nouns.

TIP SHEET

Comparison of Adjectives

Many adjectives have three forms. These are called degrees of comparison: the positive, the comparative, and the superlative. For simple description, the positive form of an adjective is used. When comparing two persons, places, things, or ideas, the comparative form is used. When comparing more than two persons, places, things, or ideas, the superlative form is used.

The green house is big. (positive)

The brown house is bigger than the green house. (comparative)

The gray house is the biggest of all. (superlative)

• For most one-syllable adjectives and some two-syllable adjectives, form the comparative degree by adding -er to the positive form. To form the superlative degree, add -est to the positive form. For some adjectives, a final -e must be dropped, a final consonant must doubled, or a final -y must be changed to -i.

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
young	younger	youngest large	larger	largest
wet	wetter	wettest
happy	happier	happiest

• For some adjectives of two syllables and most adjectives of three or more syllables, use more or most with the positive form to show degree.

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
beautiful	more beautiful	most beautiful
thrilling	more thrilling	most thrilling

 Some adjectives have irregular forms in the comparative and superlative degrees.

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
good, well	better	best
bad, ill	worse	worst
little	less	least
many, much	more	most

Adverbs

Adverbs are words that modify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs. They most often modify verbs and tell how, when, where, to what extent, or how often the action of the verb is done. Many, but not all, adverbs end in -ly.

The tip sheets and worksheets that follow address various topics and skills related to adverbs. The first tip sheet and Worksheets 6.1 through 6.3 focus on identifying adverbs. The second tip sheet and Worksheets 6.4 through 6.6 focus on the comparison of adverbs. The third tip sheet and Worksheets 6.7 and 6.8 focus on double negatives, and Worksheets 6.9 through 6.11 offer reviews for adverbs.

TIP SHEET

Adverbs

Adverbs are words that modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs.

• Adverbs usually answer one of the following questions in a sentence: How? When? Where? To what extent? How often?

Meg walked slowly. (how)

He will arrive soon. (when)

Tim stood there. (where)

She completely believed Todd's excuse. (to what extent)

She works out daily. (how often)

• Many adverbs modify verbs. An adverb that modifies a verb can appear almost anywhere in a sentence.

Finally, she finished her report.

She finally finished her report.

She finished her report finally.

• An adverb that modifies an adjective or another adverb usually comes directly before the word it modifies.

Grammar is an extremely important subject. (adverb modifying adjective)

You must speak very clearly into the microphone. (adverb modifying adverb)

• Many, but not all, adverbs end in -ly. Following are some examples of common adverbs:

almost	always	calmly	clearly completely	easily	entirely	extremely here	often	politely	quite
really	recently	SO	soon
suddenly	then	there	totally
very	when	where	yet

Comparison of Adverbs

Like adjectives, many adverbs have three forms. These are called degrees of comparison: the positive, the comparative, and the superlative.

John came early to band practice. (positive)

Lori came earlier than John. (comparative)

Joe came earliest of all. (superlative)

• To form the comparative and superlative degree for most one-syllable adverbs, add -er and -est to the positive form.

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
fast	faster	fastest
slow	slower	slowest

• To form the comparative or superlative degree for most adverbs of two or more syllables, use more or most before the positive form.

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
smoothly	more smoothly	most smoothly
recently	more recently	most recently

• Some adverbs have irregular forms in the comparative and superlative degrees.

Double Negatives

A negative word is a word that means "no." Some negative words are used as adverbs. The following are common negative words: barely, no, not (n't), hardly, nobody, nothing, neither, none, nowhere, never, no one, and scarcely.

• Only one negative word is necessary to make an affirmative (positive) statement negative. Using more than one negative word in a sentence results in a double negative, which is incorrect.

I have a cell phone. (affirmative, correct)

I do not have a cell phone. (negative, correct)

I do not have no cell phone. (double negative, incorrect)

- The contraction for not (n't) is a negative.
- To correct a double negative, substitute a positive word or drop one of the negatives.

I don't have no money with me. (double negative)

I don't have any money with me. (correct)

I have no money with me. (correct)

• Remember that barely, hardly, and scarcely are negatives. Do not use them with other negative words.

Sammi is hardly never on time. (double negative)

Sammi is hardly ever on time. (correct)

6.7 Move Over, Rover

In 1975, Gary Dahl sold more than a million of these objects to people. What were they?

Prepositions, Conjunctions, and Interjections

The final three parts of speech are prepositions, conjunctions, and interjections. Like the other parts of speech, each has a specific function in a sentence.

A preposition relates a noun or pronoun to another word in a sentence. All of the words related by a preposition, including the preposition itself, are a part of a prepositional phrase. The first two tip sheets and Worksheets 7.1 through 7.7 focus on prepositions and prepositional phrases.

A conjunction is a word that joins words or groups of words in a sentence. Several kinds of conjunctions, including coordinating conjunctions, correlative conjunctions, and subordinating conjunctions are covered in the following pages. The third tip sheet and Worksheets 7.8 and 7.9 focus on the various types of conjunctions.

An interjection is a word that shows feeling or emotion. The fourth tip sheet and Worksheet 7.10 focus on interjections.

This section concludes with Worksheets 7.11 through 7.14, which review the parts of speech.

Prepositions and Prepositional Phrases

A preposition is a word that relates a noun or pronoun to another word in a sentence. Following are examples of common prepositions.

about	before	by	near	to above	behind	during	of	toward across	below	for	off	under
after	beneath	from	on	underneath
along	beside	in	out	with around	between	inside	over	within at	beyond	into	through	without

- The noun or pronoun that follows a preposition is called the object of the preposition.
- A preposition, its object, and any words that modify the object are called a prepositional phrase.

We went into the house. (The preposition is into, house is its object, and the is an article modifying house.)

- Some prepositions are made up of two or more words.
 - They walked out of the back door.
- A preposition may have a compound object (two or more).

He started working with paint and brush.

The package was addressed to John and his brother.

7.3 Brain Power

The human brain is a remarkable organ made up of nerve cells. According to scientists, about how many nerve cells make up the average human brain?

To answer the question, read each sentence below and identify the prepositional phrase. In the parentheses that follow, a letter is called for. Find this letter in the prepositional phrase. Write the letter in the space above the phrase's sentence number at the bottom of the page. The first one is done for you. You will need to divide the letters into words.

- 1. The human brain is divided into three parts: the cerebrum, the cerebellum, and the medulla. (seventh letter)
- 2. The brain is often compared to a computer. (eighth letter)
- 3. The functions of the brain are exceedingly complex. (sixth letter)

Prepositional Phrases as Adjectives and Adverbs

Prepositional phrases can modify nouns, pronouns, verbs, adjectives, and adverbs.

• When a prepositional phrase modifies a noun or pronoun, it is called an adjective phrase. Like adjectives, adjective phrases answer the questions What kind? Which one? How much? and How many? Adjective phrases usually follow the noun or pronoun they modify.

This is a book of ancient art. (The prepositional phrase modifies the noun book.)

A girl with blonde hair claimed the book. (The prepositional phrase modifies girl.)

 When a prepositional phrase modifies a verb, adjective, or an adverb, it is called an adverb phrase. Adverb phrases answer the questions How? When? Where? How often? and To what extent?

They left in the evening. (The prepositional phrase modifies the verb left.)

Val is happy with her report card. (The prepositional phrase modifies the adjective happy.)

Jim reads late at night. (The prepositional phrase modifies the adverb late.)

7.5 Measuring the Earth's Circumference

Over two thousand years ago, this Greek mathematician, astronomer, and geographer estimated the circumference of the Earth with surprising accuracy. By some accounts, he was off by only a few hundred miles. What was his name?

To answer the question, find the adjective phrase in each sentence below. Write the letter beneath each underlined adjective phrase in the space above its sentence number at the bottom of the page.

1.	The civilization of ancient Greece	flourished nearly 2,500 years ago.

7.7 Watch Out for High Tide

Rising about seventy feet, the highest tide in the world occurs in southeastern Canada. Where exactly does this tide occur?

To answer the question, find an adjective or adverb phrase in the sentences below. In the parentheses after each sentence, a specific phrase and a letter are called for. Find the letter in the phrase, then write the letter in the space above its sentence number at the bottom of the page. The first one is done for you. You will need to divide the letters into words.

- 1. The tides around the world are caused by the moon. (adverb phrase, ninth letter)
- 2. The waters of the oceans are affected by the moon's gravity. (adjective phrase, sixth letter)
- 3. The changes of the tides vary around the world. (adverb phrase, sixth letter)
- 4. The difference between high and low tide is great in some places. (adjective phrase, first letter)
- 5. The boats of careless sailors can be stranded during low tide. (adverb phrase, second letter)
- 6. People of ancient times were puzzled by the falling and rising water. (adverb phrase, sixth letter)
- 7. Captains of old sailing vessels would leave with the outgoing tide. (adjective phrase, seventh letter)
- 8. Ships of today still sail with the tide whenever possible. (adjective phrase, seventh letter)

Conjunctions

Conjunctions are words that connect words or groups of words in a sentence.

• Coordinating conjunctions include the words and, but, or, or nor. They connect words, phrases, and sentences.

Monica and Lena are best friends.

They went to the mall and to the movies.

I thought it would snow, but it rained instead.

Louis will play third base, or he will pitch in tonight's game.

 Correlative conjunctions are pairs of words. The following are examples of correlative conjunctions:

either . . . or neither . . . nor not only not only . . . but also both . . . and

Loaded with homework, I had neither the time nor the energy to play video games.

Tara is not only president of the student council but also secretary of the Spanish club.

• Subordinating conjunctions are words that begin adverb clauses. The following are examples of subordinating conjunctions:

after	as long as	if	though	whenever although	as soon as	since	unless	where as	because	so that	until	wherever as if	before	then	when	while

As soon as the shower ends, we will finish the game.

While waiting for her brother, Danielle read her novel.

Ming didn't know where he had left his keys.

7.8 A Lot of Snow

One of the highest yearly snowfall totals ever recorded occurred in Washington state in the winter of 1971–1972. Over 1,224 inches (about 102 feet!) of snow fell. At what place did this occur?

To answer the question, find the coordinating or subordinating conjunction in each set of words below. Write the letter of the conjunction in the space above its line number at the bottom of the page. You will need to divide the letters into words.

1.	S. on	A. and	P. over	E. your

Interjections

An interjection is a word or group of words that expresses feeling or emotion. Interjections have no grammatical relationship to any other word in a sentence. The following list contains common interjections.

aha	hooray	oh	phew
good grief	my goodness	oh, dear	well
great	gee	oh, no	wow
hey	ouch	oops	ugh

• An interjection that expresses a strong feeling is followed by an exclamation point. Such interjections stand alone, either before or after a sentence.

Oh, no! I left my book report at home.

Ouch! I stubbed my toe.

I got an A on my project. Wow!

• An interjection that expresses a milder feeling usually appears at the beginning of a sentence and is followed by a comma.

Oh, I forgot to call Jimmy.

Gee, I'm not sure about that.

7.10 Spinning Round and Round

North of the equator, hurricanes, cyclones, and typhoons spin in a counterclockwise direction. South of the equator, storms spin in the opposite direction. Why is this so?

To answer the question, find the interjection in each sentence below. In the parentheses after each sentence, a letter is called for. Find this letter in the interjection, and write the letter in the space above its sentence number at the bottom of the page. The first one is done for you. You will need to divide the letters into words.

- 1. I haven't started my report about the Earth for science. Good grief! (ninth letter)
- 2. Yikes! I also have a book report due on the same day. (second letter)
- 3. Oh, no! I just remembered I have a history assignment, too. (third letter)

Punctuation and Capitalization

Inderstanding punctuation and capitalization is important to understanding grammar. Punctuation and capitalization help to make written expression clear. Imagine a paragraph composed of sentences with no punctuation marks or capital letters. Such a paragraph would be a challenge to read.

The tip sheets and worksheets that follow concentrate on punctuation and capitalization. The first tip sheet and Worksheets 8.1 and 8.2 address abbreviations. The tip sheets and worksheets from 8.3 through 8.18 focus on specific punctuation—end marks, commas, colons, semicolons, apostrophes, quotation marks, and italics—while Worksheets 8.19 through 8.28 offer general reviews of punctuation. The final tip sheet and Worksheets 8.29 through 8.33 focus on capitalization, with Worksheet 8.34 providing a review of capitalization.

End Punctuation and Periods

End punctuation includes periods, question marks, and exclamation points. Because they end sentences and indicate the end of abbreviations and initials, these are some of the most important marks of punctuation.

• A period ends a statement or command.

It looks like rain.

We will go shopping on Saturday.

Please close the door.

• A question mark ends a question.

Will it rain tonight?

Do you think we'll have homework for the weekend?

What page are the math problems on?

• An exclamation point ends an exclamation.

Watch out!

Oh, no! I forgot to do my homework.

What a catch! Wow!

• Use a period in most abbreviations and after initials.

Colons and Semicolons

Colons and semicolons have special uses. Use a colon for the following:

• To set off words in a list.

Louisa wrote down the items she needed for the party: napkins, paper plates, paper cups, and decorations.

• Between hours and minutes in time.

9:30 A.M.

7:45 P.M.

• After the greeting of a business letter.

Dear Ms. Taylor:

Dear Mr. Alvarez:

• To set off an important idea.

Directions: Read each sentence and find the adverb.

Use a semicolon for the following:

• Between independent clauses not joined by coordinate conjunctions (and, but, or, or nor.)

Tonya wanted to go to the movies; Deidre wanted to go shopping.

• Between independent clauses when the second clause begins with words such as however, for instance, for example, thus, furthermore, nevertheless, therefore, and as a result.

We arrived at the airport in plenty of time; however, our flight didn't leave for several hours

Between independent clauses if there are commas in one or both of the clauses.

Amy excels at softball, basketball, and track; but her sister is an outstanding singer, dancer, and violinist.

Between items in a series if the items contain commas.

For our science project, our group had to find, focus, and research a topic; make charts, tables, and models; and give an oral presentation to the class.

Apostrophes

Apostrophes are used to show the possessive case of nouns and to indicate omitted letters in contractions.

• Show the possessive case of singular nouns by adding an apostrophe and -s.

Examples: Lila's cell phone, the kitten's toy mouse, James's bike, the baby's crib, the tree's roots, the house's roof

An exception to this rule is for nouns of more than one syllable that end in an -s sound. The singular possessive case may be formed by adding only an apostrophe.

Examples: Moses' beliefs, the witness' explanation, Mr. Rogers' sweater

• Show the possessive case of plural nouns that end in -s by adding an apostrophe.

Examples: the two brothers' business, the horses' stable, the girls' soccer team

• Show the possessive case of plural nouns that do not end in -s by adding an apostrophe and -s.

Examples: a men's clothing store, the children's tickets, the geese's nesting grounds

Use an apostrophe to indicate missing letters in a contraction.

do not	don't
could have	could've
they are	they're
that is	that's

8.10 By Another Name

Before Tennessee became a state in 1796, a part of it was organized as a separate state with another name. What was this "state" called?

To answer the question, read the paragraph below and determine whether each underlined apostrophe is used correctly. Starting with the first sentence, write the letters beneath the correctly used apostrophes in order on the blanks at the bottom of the page.

Kristen, Sues' best friend, is an expert on the states'. Sue is certain that there \bar{C} isn't anything Kristen does not know about the states. For instance, she knows all the states' capitals, their biggest cities', and their populations. She also knows each state's R E A most important industries and tourist sites'. Kristen's favorite state, of course, is \bar{U} \bar{N}

Tennessee. That's because she was born there. In Kristens' opinion, Tennessee's natural K beauty makes it a wonderful place to live. Sue couldn't agree more with her best friends' opinion, because Sue's home is there, too.

Quotation Marks

Quotation marks are used to set off the words of speakers and to indicate certain titles.

• Use quotation marks to set off the direct words of a speaker. A direct quote begins with a capital letter. It is separated from the rest of the sentence by a comma, unless the quotation ends with a question mark or exclamation point. Commas and end marks are placed inside quotation marks.

"It is a pleasant day," said Jan.

Antoine said, "The movie begins at eight."

"When is the science report due?" asked Will.

• A divided quotation occurs when a speaker tag (for example, he said) divides a quotation into two parts. If the second part of the quotation is part of the first, a comma follows the speaker tag and the second part begins with a small letter. If the second part of the quotation starts a new sentence, it must begin with a capital letter.

"If it is nice Saturday," said Allie, "we can go hiking."

"It is supposed to be nice Saturday," said Allie. "We can go hiking."

• Use single quotation marks to indicate a quotation within a quotation.

"Tom said, 'The game is at home,'" said Lisa.

• Use quotation marks to indicate certain titles, including stories, songs, articles, chapters of books, and poems.

Story: "Raymond's Run"

Song: "America the Beautiful"

Article: "How to Earn Great Grades"

Chapter of Book: "The Best Part-Time Jobs for Kids"

Poem: "The Raven"

8.24 Big Trees

Capable of growing up to three hundred feet, this tree is considered to be one of the world's biggest. What is it?

To answer the question, read the paragraph below. Find each incorrectly used punctuation mark. Starting with the first sentence, write the letters beneath the incorrectly used punctuation marks in order on the blanks at the bottom of the page.

Scientists estimate that the Earth is home to between sixty thousand, and seventy S thousand species of trees. Some scientists wonder if there are even more than G seventy thousand? Except in extremely dry or cold regions, trees are found R throughout the world. Trees may be grouped into two broad categories; evergreen M Q trees and deciduous trees. Evergreen trees, such as pines, and spruces, keep their T U T leaves through the year. Deciduous trees, such as maples and oaks, lose their leaves' A R B O as cold weather approaches. Did you know that much of the world's oxygen comes H U from trees. Trees absorb carbon dioxide from the air, and they release oxygen as a by-product: of photosynthesis. Photosynthesis, of course, is the process by which green plants use light to turn water and carbon dioxide into food.

Usage and Proofreading

ord usage is an important part of grammar. Words like affect and effect, good and well, and lay and lie are easy to mix up. Even if you understand the meanings of these words, you may make mistakes with them if you are not careful. Because these words, and words like them, are easily confused, they may slip into your speaking and writing. You can avoid making usage mistakes by understanding the meanings of easily confused words and proofreading your written work with care.

The tip sheets and worksheets that follow focus on word usage and proofreading. The first tip sheet identifies several of the most easily confused words in English, and Worksheets 9.1 through 9.6 provide practice in recognizing and using these words correctly. The second tip sheet offers guidelines for proofreading for mistakes in grammar, and Worksheets 9.7 through 9.14 focus on proofreading practice and a general review of grammar.

Proofreading for Mistakes in Grammar

When you are proofreading to find mistakes in grammar, follow the basic guidelines described here.

- 1. The first word in a sentence, all proper nouns, the pronoun l, and all proper adjectives are capitalized.
- 2. All sentences have correct ending punctuation: periods for declarative and imperative sentences, question marks for interrogative sentences, and exclamation points for exclamatory sentences.
- 3. Commas are used to separate items in a list; to set off introductory words, phrases, and clauses; between city and state; in dates; after direct address; and to set off quotations.
- 4. Apostrophes are used to show possessive nouns and to indicate contractions.
- 5. Colons are used for time and to set off lists.
- 6. Semicolons are used to join independent clauses when a conjunction is not used, and to join items in series that already contain commas.
- 7. Quotation marks are used for the titles of stories, songs, poems, the chapters of books, and to show the direct words of speakers.
- 8. Italics are used for the titles of books, plays, TV shows, and movies; for the names of newspapers and magazines; and for the names of certain vehicles.
- 9. Subjects agree with their verbs.
- 10. Pronouns agree with their antecedents.
- 11. The tenses of verbs are correct.
- 12. All words are used correctly.

Of course, along with proofreading for mistakes in grammar, you should make sure that all spelling is correct. You should also be certain that you have used the best words to share your ideas. Gary Robert Muschla

"We need a good topic," Amy said to her friends. They began to brainstorm, but couldn't decide on a subject. "Can you look in here?" said Melissa to William, handing him a book. "How about the water cycle?" he said. "That topic sounds good to me," said Amy. "There should be enough information for us," said Melissa. "Who wants to check for information on the Internet?" said Amy. "I will," said Melissa, giving them a big smile. The students began their research. Dead Sea The answers for the paragraph are marked in bold. Kerrie and her older sister Samantha went on a nature walk recently. They took lunch and plenty of equipment with them. Do you think we will see any animals?" Kerrie asked as they stood in a small clearing. "We might," said Samantha. "Please hand me the binoculars." Kerrie pulled the binoculars from her knapsack and handed them to her. She watched as Samantha scanned the surrounding area. "There. Do you see it?" Samantha said, pointing at a stand of trees. "A fawn. And there's a bigger deer just behind him." "Yes," said Kerrie. "I see them. But they don't see us." Ostrich (with letters reversed) 1. I 2. M 3. S 4. I 5. A 6. P 7. B 8. H 9. A 10.
